Objective and duties of FELM Volunteer	Short description of the tasks
Work together with Felm staff and Cambodian partners to support the awareness raising of environmental issues and climate change. Support the Felm Cambodia team and Felm partner organisations in mainstreaming climate change and environmental sustainability in their work.	Field visits to observe Partners’ work on the field and to learn about the context of that work. Debrief with observations of issues relevant to environment and climate change and provide a set of practical recommendations to improve the work. Support both the Felm Cambodia team and Felm partner organisations to promote good environmental standards in their offices and in their activities. Based on Partners context and existing capacity, conduct training to staff members and other key people on environment and climate change. Training should cover needs identified by Partners and Felm Cambodia team, and include practical questions such as how can partners assess and minimise their environmental impact, and contribute to positive change instead??

Work with Partners' management to:

- Understanding Felm reporting and proposals: what are the donor requirements on environment and climate change issues? How to improve their reporting on this?
- How to approach environment and climate change as a cross-cutting issue, from project planning stages; to baseline analysis; to mainstreaming in all activities; to reporting stages.

Competence / Qualifications / Language requirements:

- Meet the requirements of the Felm Volunteer program
- Relevant university or other degree in a subject related to the environment, environmental education, environmental health or development cooperation.
- Strong work experience in a role related to environmental sustainability and climate change. Work experience in developing country context and knowledge of drought-resistant agriculture and/or regenerative agriculture would be an asset.
- Some previous overseas experience and experience working cross culturally would be considered an asset.
- Strong spoken and written English

Health considerations: Please note that this assignment would require travel to the Cambodian country-side and would take place during the hot season. Phnom Penh has very high levels of air-pollution.
